NEW MONUMENT IS COMPLETED

Memorial to Abraham Lincoln Erected in National Cemetery Declared to be Unusually Attractive. Some Complaint.

To the memory of Abraham Lincoln and his Gettysburg speech there has been erected in the National Cemetery a $5,000 memorial of granite and bronze, the monument being placed immediately south of the rostrum, on the site which had been occupied for many years by the popular pavilion which was a resting place for many who visited the field. This has been moved to the side, its ultimate end not yet having been announced.

The work of erecting the monument was started several weeks ago by Charles Kappes who got all the stone in place before the severe cold weather. The bust of Lincoln was delayed in transit and that was put up only this week. The memorial is a beautiful work of the sculptor's art and is a great ornament to the Cemetery.

Granting all this, there is a general belief among local persons that its erection will be followed by much criticism on the part of those who wish to see the memory of Abraham Lincoln remembered in a more fitting manner. It is argued by those who hold this view that the monument is a small tribute to a big man and that its meager cost contributes little to the tribute America should pay to the martyr president.

The appropriation for the erection of the memorial was made about five years ago by Congress and provided for an expenditure of $5,000. For several reasons the money was not put to use until the latter part of 1911 and the recent erection is due to this delay.

The monument is of the design known as the exedra, the only other example at Gettysburg being the Collins memorial which is considerably smaller. The bust of Lincoln is in bronze while two tablets, the one containing his Gettysburg address, are on either side of the center pedestal.

Owing to inclement weather but few Gettysburg people have seen the new addition to Gettysburg's collection of Civil War memorials and the accompanying cut will be of unusual interest. The old pavilion may be seen at the side of the memorial where it has found a temporary location.

FIREMEN ENJOY ANNUAL BANQUET

Elaborate Supper Served Members of Gettysburg Fire Department and their Friends in Banquet Hall on Thursday Evening.

Gettysburg's firemen and their friends to the number of one hundred and fifty held their annual banquet in the hall of the Independent Americans on Thursday evening and enjoyed thoroughly an elaborate course dinner.

Preceding the banquet speeches were made by William McSherry, Esq., and William Hersh, Esq., who spoke of the valuable service the company had rendered the town in the past and of the manner in which they should be rewarded for their work. It was suggested among other things that every tax payer should give something toward the support of the company and that fire insurance companies should reward the firefighters for successful efforts in saving property. J. Harry Holtzworth presided at the informal meeting held before the banquet was served.

The supper consisted of oysters prepared in a number of different ways, chicken and all the good things that go with a chicken dinner, ice cream and cake. It was served by the following young ladies of town, Misses Alma Andrew, Katie Smith, Emma Hoffman, Bessie Breighner, Gertrude Slonaker, Mary Slonaker, Jennie Althoff, Zita Kame, May Slonaker, Vera Speese, Viola Garlach and Carrie Miller.

CRUIKSHANK TO REJOIN FAMILY

Man Supposed to Have Been Dead Returns.

LIFE INSURANCE RETURNED

Saying He Came Back to "Face the Music." He Starts to Meet Wife and Children He Deserted Two Years Ago.

New York, Jan. 26.—Barton S. Cruikshank, who dropped out of sight on the St. Lawrence river in June, 1910, after faking evidence that led his friends to suppose him drowned, and who turned up in New York about two weeks ago as Donald Douglas after some insurance on his life had been collected, and then sailed for Porto Rico as quickly as lawyers interested in the case could hustle him on board ship, returned.

His coming back was quite spectacular. The story of his disappearance, his various affairs with women and the prominent part he once played in national guard circles and as a director of the Clarkson Institute of Technology, had made him an object of interest, and he proposed to capitalize the story of his many deceptions and sell it for bed and board money.

So in order to keep his goods intact he led would-be interviewers a hare and hound chase from Brooklyn, where the steamship on which he arrived docked, to the office of Lawyer Lowen E. Ginn, in Broadway, where the bargaining for the tale of Cruikshank's past was conducted.

The bidding was slow, but it is understood enough was realized to pay the lawyers who assisted at Cruikshank's rebirth and to provide him with the price of a ticket to Potsdam, N. Y., where the wife he deserted is now living with her two children, one of whom was born during the period in which Cruikshank was supposed to be dead.

It has been announced by Cruikshank's lawyers that the insurance money has been paid back, and so far as is known Cruikshank has no reason to fear arrest if he returns to the place where he was once respected.

Shortly after Cruikshank's arrival at Lawyer Ginn's office word was sent out to the reporters that a statement would be given out by Percival Whipple, who when Cruikshank was Donald Douglas, was his partner in an engineering firm on Church street, in the office there Whipple displayed this statement, signed "Barton Cruikshank":

"Until I had a talk with my partner, Mr. Whipple, and my lawyer, I preferred to say nothing. I am now willing to say that I am going north to confer with my family, and until that is over I have nothing further to say, except that there is no truth in any of the stories about women. I have come back to face the music."

Cruikshank traveled under the name of "G. W. Fuller." Throughout the trip from San Juan Fuller persistently denied that he was Cruikshank. He said he did not know who Cruikshank was, and had never heard of him up to the time of his departure from San Juan, when he was asked by reporters at the pier if he were not the former national guardsman listed as dead after his disappearance from his home in Potsdam, N. Y., in 1910, and the subsequent finding of his empty canoe in the St. Lawrence river.

WEARS CUT GLASS HEELS

Mrs. Longworth Startles Washington With Innovation.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, responsible for many innovations in dress and fashions, is astonishing her friends by wearing cut glass heels on her slippers.

Mrs. Longworth created this Cinderella effect in connection with a gown with tulle shoulder wings, another Longworth fashion.

The train was divided in two parts, and as she stepped it parted long enough to give one a glimpse of the sparkling heels. When Mrs. Longworth dances the effect is even more startling.

Shot Down in Railroad Station.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Robert S. Dennis, of Chicago, was shot, probably fatally, as he was changing trains at the New York Central station. The assailant, who was arrested, said he was Gaspar Martens, a barber of Chicago, and said that he shot Dennis because he feared he might be a Black Hand agent.

MINERS ADOPT RECALL SYSTEM FOR OFFICIALS

Ten Per Cent. of Membership to be Effective.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 26.—Recall of international officers of the United Mine Workers of America is provided in a constitutional amendment adopted by the miners' convention.

Ten per cent of the membership may initiate a recall, and on petition of 30 per cent an election shall be held.

Socialist leaders decried the recall machinery was too cumbersome to be effective.

President John P. White urged caution in introducing the reform and supported the plan as adopted. He declared in favor of recall of judges, and said if it had been available years ago trades unionism would not have suffered the wrongs from the courts that had impeded its progress.

By an amendment to the constitution the miners' convention will be held every two years, instead of annually, hereafter.

SAY NAGEL WILL WIN

Cabinet Officer to Go on U. S. Supreme Bench.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The latest indications as to a new justice of the supreme court to succeed the late Justice John M. Harlan are that President Taft will appoint Charles Nagel, the present secretary of commerce and labor.

Many protests have been lodged the president against the appointment of United States Circuit Judge William C. Hook to the supreme bench, but it is said that these protests did not deter the president.

Attorney General Wickersham strongly favors the appointment of Chief Justice White does also. Secretary Nagel before his appointment to the cabinet was considered one of the ablest practicing lawyers in the Middle West. He believes in federal regulation of the great corporations.

OSBORN OUT FOR ROOSEVELT

STEEL DEBATE OPENS TODAY

Democratic Tariff Reducing Measure in House.

PALMER STARTS ARGUMENT

Republicans Will Fight the Bill by Offering a Long String of Amendments.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The tariff revision debate of the Sixty-second congress began today in the house, when Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, opened the argument in favor of the steel and iron schedule reported by Chairman Underwood, of the ways and means committee.

The attitude of the Republicans toward the Democratic revision program was indicated at the meeting of the committee when Representative Payne moved that consideration of the iron and steel schedule be deferred until a report had been received from the tariff board. This was lost by a strict party vote.

The Republican members indicated that there would be no Republican substitute for the Democratic bill, but a long string of amendments would be offered.

The majority report filed with the bill says:

"A survey of the iron and steel industry shows convincingly that it has reached a position of such strength and independence that the industry does not need the helping hand of the government in order to stand in competition with foreign countries.

"The committee feels warranted in recommending that the duties be placed upon a distinctly revenue basis."

The report declares the rates should be made low enough to permit potential competition from imports for the sake of natural and proper regulation of domestic prices, and concludes:

"It is believed that the rates provided for in this bill are competitive and if enacted would effect a substantial economy to the people greatly disproportionate in its advantages to the small apparent loss of revenue."

The seven Republican members of the committee also filed their report. It declared that the steel schedule should not be revised without a report from the tariff board and that the bill was framed without hearings and was in no way justified "by the full hearings three years ago before the committee."

That the Democrats have practically completed the wool schedule was disclosed when Representative Payne moved that "schedule K as drawn by Mr. Underwood and his colleagues" be redrafted to conform with the report of the tariff board submitted in December. This motion was lost, also by a straight party vote.

Senator Smoot is engaged in preparing a bill along the lines of the tariff board report.

Following the passage of the steel bill, the ways and means committee will introduce the chemical and then the sugar schedules. Both are nearly ready for a Democratic caucus. The cotton schedule will be taken up after that.

Chairman Underwood estimates that these will be all that can be handled at this session, but if there is time for more, the agriculture schedule will be considered.

The identity of the man may never be revealed, for the face was mutilated beyond recognition.

WOMAN FOUND SLAIN

Husband, in Faint Nearby, Held as a Witness.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Rigid investigation is being made into the death of Mrs. Edith Marvel, twenty-eight years old, a trained nurse, who was found dead on the second floor of her home, with a bullet through her heart.

The police were notified of the shooting by telephone calls from the husband. Upon their arrival officers found Mrs. Marvel dead and her husband lying in a faint on the stairway to the room where the shooting occurred.

William Marvel, the husband, was revived at the Hahnemann hospital and detained as a material witness. He had a hearing before Magistrate MacFarland and was held without bail to await the action of the coroner.

When the rooms were searched two notes were found, purporting to have been written by Mrs. Marvel, in which were expressed her intention of committing suicide.

Policemen obtained specimens of the woman's handwriting and stated that the writing of the notes did not correspond with hers. She wrote a small, cramped hand, and the last letters were written in a large, firm hand.

Coroner Knight ordered the specimens of handwriting taken to an expert for examination. One of the letters read:

"To whom it may concern — Will Marvel has nothing to do with this. I am tired of life and the only one regret I have is leaving him. I am tired of life and wish to quit. Goodbye. Edith Marvel."

This Year's Contracts Call For 150,000 Tons.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—The Pennsylvania railroad announced that it has placed its order for 150,000 tons of steel rails for the lines east and west of Pittsburgh for delivery during the present year.

While this order comes later than usual, it is the same amount as contracted for last year. The railroad declined to state the prices for the rails, nor would it disclose the apportionment of the distribution of the order to the various mills.

It is understood, however, that the bulk of the order will go to the Cambria Steel company, both of which are believed to be controlled practically by the Pennsylvania railroad. A portion of the order will probably go to the United States Steel corporation.

PUBLIC SALE

THE GIRL from HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST

Ruggles' Offer.

He felt as he waited for her in that flower-filled room, for she had recovered from her distaste for flowers, as he glanced at the photographs of women like herself in costumes more or less frank, more or less vulgar, he felt as though he wanted to knock down the walls and let in a big view of the west—of Montana—of the hills.

Ruggles held an unlighted cigar between his fingers and gooselike rose all over him. His glasses bothered him. He couldn't get them bright enough, though he polished them half a dozen times on his silk handkerchief. His clothes felt too large. He seemed to have shrunk.

Miss Lane kept him waiting ten minutes, and they were hours to her guest. He was afraid every minute that Dan would come in. The thought he had gathered together, the plan of action, disarranged itself in his mind every time he thought of the arrival.

She had dazzled him before the foot-lights, charmed him at dinner, and it was singular to think that he knew how this dignified, quiet creature looked in ballet clothes and in a dinner dress, whose frankness had made him catch his breath. It was a third woman who stood before Ruggles now. He had to take her into consideration. She had expected him, saw him by appointment. She had not climbed to her starry position without having acquired a knowledge of men, and it was the secret of her success. She showed it in the dress in which she received her visitor. She wore a short walking skirt of heavy serge, a simple shirtdress belted around, a sailor hat on her beautiful little head. She was unjeweled and unpainted, very pale and very sweet.

It had not been for the marks of fatigue under her eyes, she would not have looked more than eighteen. On her left hand a single diamond, clear as water, caught the refracted light. "How-de-do? Glad you are back again."

She gave him a big chair and sat down before him smiling. Leaning her elbows on her knees, she sank her face upon her hands and looked at him, not coquettishly in the least, but as a child might have looked. From her small feet to her golden head she was utterly charming.

Ruggles made himself think of Dan. Miss Lane spoke slowly, nodding toward him, in her languid voice: "It's no use, Mr. Ruggles, no use."

Holding her face between her hands, her eyes gray as winter's seas and as profound, she looked at him intently; then, in a flash, she changed her position and instantly transformed her character. He saw that she was a woman, not an eighteen-year-old girl, but a woman, clever, poised, witty, understanding, and that she might have been twenty years older than the boy.

"I'm sorry you spoke so quick," he said. "I knew," she interrupted, "just what you wanted to say from the start. I couldn't help it, could I? I knew you would want to come and see me about it. It isn't any use. I know just what you are going to say. 'No, no, no,' he returned, 'I don't believe you are going to say that.' Ruggles gazed thoughtfully at the cold end of his unlighted cigar. It was a comfort to him to hold it and to look at it, although not for anything in the world would he have asked to light it.

well how the boy with his eyes at the tent hole would feel." But he tapped his broad chest with the hand that held the cigar between the first and second fingers. "I know just what kind of a heart you've got, for I waited at the stage door and I know you don't get all the applause inside the Gaiety theater."

"Goodness," she murmured, "they make an awful fuss about nothing."

"Now," he continued, leaning forward a trifle toward her languid, half-interested figure, "I just want you to think of him as a little boy. He's only twenty-two. He knows nothing of the world. The money you give to the poor doesn't come so hard perhaps as this will. It's a big sacrifice, but I want you to let the boy go."

She smiled slightly, found her handkerchief, which was tucked up the cuff of her blouse, pressed the little bit of linen to her lips as though to steady them, then she asked abruptly: "What has he said to you?"

"Lord!" Ruggles groaned. "Said to me! My dear young lady, he is much too rude to speak. Dan sort of breathes and snorts around like a lunatic. He was dangling around that duchess when I was here before, but she didn't scare me any."

And Letty Lane, now smiling at him, relieved by his break from a more intense tone, asked: "Now, you are scared?"

"Well," Ruggles drawled, "I was pretty sure that woman didn't care anything for the boy. Are you her kind?"

It was the best stroke he had made. She almost sprang up from her chair. "Heavens," she exclaimed, "I guess I'm not!" Her face flushed.

"I had rather see a son of mine dead than married to a woman like that," he said.

"Why, Mr. Ruggles," she exclaimed passionately, addressing him with interest for the first time, "what do you know about me? What? What? You have seen me dance and heard me sing."

He wanted to tell her that the girl Dan married should be the kind of woman his mother was, but Ruggles couldn't bring himself to say the words. Now, as he sat near her, he was growing so complex that his brain was turning round. He heard her murmur:

"I told you I knew your act, Mr. Ruggles. It isn't any use."

This brought him back to his position and once more he leaned toward her and, in a different tone from the one he had intended to use, murmured:

"You don't know. You haven't any idea. I do ask you to let Dan go, that's a fact. I have got something else to propose in its place. It isn't quite the same, but it is clear—marry me!"

She gave a little exclamation. A slight smile rippled over her face like the sunset across a pale pool at dawn.

"Laugh," he said humbly, "don't keep in. I know I am old-fashioned as the deuce, and me and Dan is quite a contrast, but I mean just what I say, my dear."

She controlled her amusement, if it was that. It almost made her cry with mirth, and she couldn't help it. Between laughing breaths she said to him:

"Oh, is it all for Dan's sake, Mr. Ruggles? Is it?" And then, biting her lips and looking at him out of her beautiful eyes, she said: "I know it is—I know it is—I beg your pardon."

"I asked a girl once when I was poor—too poor. Now this is the second time in my life. I mean just what I say. I'll make you a kind husband. I am fifty-five, hale as a nut. I dare say you have had many better offers."

"Oh, dear," she breathed; "oh, dear, please—please stop!"

TAFT GREET ROYAL VISITORS

Duke of Connaught is Received in White House.

CAVALRY GUARD OF HONOR

Royal Visitor and His Escort Were Received in the Blue Room—Takes Tea With Mrs. Taft.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The Duke of Connaught was officially welcomed to this country by President Taft at the White House. The ceremonies were marked by all the military and official honors usually accorded to visiting members of royal families, while a large crowd pressing against the high iron fence that surrounds the White House grounds, testified to unofficial Washington's interest in the distinguished visitor.

The duke was met at the station by James Bryce, the British ambassador, and his entire staff, also by the personal aide-de-camp of the president, Major Archibald W. Butt, who extended the personal welcome of the president to his royal highness and placed the president's automobiles at his disposal and accompanied him to the British embassy, where he remained until escorted to the White House to pay his respects to the president.

The third assistant secretary of state, accompanied by Colonel Cosby, U. S. A., and Lieutenant Timmins, U. S. N., called at the British embassy to escort his royal highness, accompanied by the British ambassador, and their staffs to the White House, afterward returning in the same manner.

Myer acted as an escort to the duke, the British ambassador, and the remainder of the party from the British embassy to the White House. The president's military and naval staff received the Duke of Connaught and his entourage at the entrance to the White House and conducted them into the green room. The president then entered the blue room, accompanied by his personal aide. The representative of the state department was then notified that the president was waiting to receive the Duke of Connaught, who then entered the blue room, accompanied by the British ambassador and the representative of the state department.

The state department representative, Mr. Chandler Hale, announced the Duke of Connaught and his excellency, the British ambassador. The British ambassador presented the duke to the president.

After the reception of the Duke of Connaught by the president the staff of the duke and the staff of the British embassy were conducted into the blue room by a military and naval aide and presented to the president.

Immediately following the presentation of the staffs the president asked the duke to have a cup of tea with Mrs. Taft in the red room.

Mrs. Taft had invited the wives of the cabinet officers and their husbands and the wife of the British ambassador to be present at this informal tea.

On leaving the White House the mounted cavalry band, stationed immediately in front of the north portico, played the American national anthem until the Duke of Connaught and his party left the White House grounds. The band, which was stationed within the grounds prior to the arrival of the duke and his party, played the British national air, "God Save the King," and continued the anthem until the duke entered the White House.

After the duke had returned to the British embassy the cavalry escort was dismissed and the president paid a return call.

The Duke of Connaught was the tenth visitor of royalty who has been entertained at the White House.

REV. DR. M. C. PETERS.

New York Minister Follows Lead of Mayor Shank.

DR. PETERS TURNS GRUCER

Tries Plan to Help Poor by Cutting Middleman's Profits Out. New York, Jan. 26.—The Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, emulating Mayor Lew Shank, of Indianapolis, is going to run a grocery store here and sell full weight at low prices.

The plan was suggested at a meeting of the Pilgrim Congregational church, of which Dr. Peters is pastor, when many told of their troubles with middlemen, and this suggested a store on the Shank lines.

"I knew that the farmers were getting $9,000,000,000 for their products and that the consumers were paying $13,000,000,000 for them," said Dr. Peters, "and it seemed to me that that was to wide a margin."

"Christ wrought a miracle to feed the multitude," he continued. "I cannot work a miracle, but in the matter of bringing food to the poor people I believe that I can come pretty near it."

RAILROAD ENGINEERS DEMAND WAGE RAISE

Employees of All Lines Ask 15 to 25 Per Cent. More.

New York, Jan. 26.—Locomotive engineers on all railroads in the eastern territory have made demands for a general increase in wages ranging from 15 to 25 per cent.

The demands involve all railroads east of Chicago and north of the line of the Norfolk & Western railway and of the Ohio river.

Letters from Brotherhood officials to the presidents of these railroads demand increased wages in varying scales, the object being to standardize the wage scale on all lines in this territory, as was done by the trainmen and conductors in 1910.

The General Managers' association has been asked to appoint a committee to negotiate with a committee of the Brotherhood in order that the question can be dealt with collectively.

Railroad men who have discussed this new demand of the engineers believe that the time is inopportune for a movement of this kind and are inclined to think that railroads will not grant the demands.

CATFISH WOUND KILLS

Isaac Sweigard Dies of Blood Poisoning in Florida.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Wounded on the hand by a catfish about one week ago, Isaac A. Sweigard, former general manager of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway company, and a widely known railroad man of this city, died in St. Lucie, Florida, as the result of blood poisoning.

With Mr. Sweigard when he died were his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Reed, of Atlantic City. Mr. Sweigard was sixty-eight years old.

Wants Interstate Corporation Board. Washington, Jan. 26.—An interstate corporation commission was proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Morgan, Republican, of Oklahoma. The bill would give the commission authority to fix maximum prices and regulate the business methods of corporations engaged in interstate trade.

"Dan's Father and Me Were Chums."

ther; he didn't ask her if the things were true. Looking at her as he did, watching her as he did, there was in him a feeling so new, so troubling that he found himself more anxious to protect her than to bring her to justice.

"There are worse, far worse women than I am, Mr. Ruggles. I will never do Dan any harm."

Here her visitor leaned forward and put one of his big hands lightly over one of hers, patted it a moment, and said:

"I want you to do a great deal better than that."

She had picked up a photograph of the table, a pretty picture of herself in "Mandalay," and turned it nervously between her fingers as she said with irritation:

"I haven't been in the theatrical world not to guess at this 'Worried Father' act, Mr. Ruggles. I told you I knew just what you were going to say."

"Wrong!" he repeated. "The bustiness is old enough perhaps, lots of good jobs are old, but this is a little different."

He took the turning picture and laid it on the table, and quietly possessed himself of the small cold hands. Blair's solitary shone up to him. Ruggles looked into Letty Lane's eyes. "He is only twenty-two; it ain't fair, it ain't fair. He could count the times he has been on a lark, I guess. He hasn't even been to an eastern college. He is no fool, but he's darned simple."

She smiled faintly. The man's face, near her own, was very simple indeed. "You have seen so much," he urged, "so many fellows. You have been such a queen, I dare say you could get any man you wanted." He repeated "Most any man."

CLASS 16—Largest apple in show. No award in Adams County.

CLASS 17—Largest and best individual display of fruit not entered in any other class.

Tyson Brothers, first prize.

CLASS 18—Best collection of nuts. No award in Adams County.

CLASS 19—County Association trophy, silver cup for largest and best county exhibit, fruit not entered in any other class. Won by Adams County.

The Adams County growers certainly deserve credit for the premiums won. The judging was strictly according to merit. Three judges were secured from other states and each exhibit was made with a number, so that the judges had no way of knowing whose fruit they were inspecting until after all the awards had been made.

The exhibit of the Adams County Fruit Growers Association was especially creditable. It contained ten barrels, one hundred and five boxes, and over two hundred plates. Large display cards were printed, giving the name of the Association and orchard photographs were scattered through the exhibit. Displays of this kind have a distinct advertising value which should not be overlooked, and this work should be encouraged and supported by the fruit growers of Adams County, to a man.

MEN RISK TOO MUCH

Life insurance companies now are very careful about issuing policies to active men over 35 years old for the chances are that they have impaired their health greatly by overwork.

Of course, if steps are taken in time, this damage can be repaired. Mr. Everett Neely of San Antonio, Tex., says in a recent letter:

"My health failed lately owing to overwork, and as I did not get better after a month, I began taking Vinol. It has given me a better appetite, helped me to sleep and built me up in general so that I now feel like my former self. It is a great pleasure to recommend Vinol to every one who needs a strength renewer."

Every man, woman and child who is in poor health, weak, nervous and run down, ought to know that Vinol is exactly the right thing to build them up and make them strong again. It is made from fresh cod livers and tonic iron, without any oil and is delicious to take. We guarantee Vinol to do just what we say and give back your money if it does not. People's Drug Store. Gettysburg, Pa.
